

Murwillumbah Bridge - in 1901 a lift-span bridge was built allowing shipping to continue to go further upstream and this was replaced by the present bridge in 1968.

River Board Walk - built at Nicholl Park by the Tweed Shire Council and opened in 1993.

Riverside Backpackers/Youth Hostel - this colourful Federation building was built in 1911 and overlooks the Tweed River. It was formerly the home of Captain Lowe, who ran the river boat ferry. In 1980, the house was converted into a Youth Hostel and Tassie Duff became the manager. Currently, he is the longest serving manager of any Youth Hostel in Australia. Travellers of all age groups stay here, with about 75% from overseas and 25% from all over Australia.

Sikh Temple

Council Buildings: Tweed Shire Council meets regularly in the Murwillumbah Civic & Cultural Centre, opened in 1975 by Prime Minister Gough Whitlam. The building also contains a public library. Beside the library is the Autumn Club where many social activities are held for Murwillumbah's seniors.

Swimming Pool - a river pool was originally Murwillumbah's town pool. In 1932 a small in-ground pool was established on the corner of Tumbulgum Road. In 1962, the current Olympic Pool was constructed and the original pool was subdivided into three smaller pools.

Sikh Temple or Gurdwara - The Old Boy's Rugby League Club built in 1978 was converted to the Sikh Temple in 1983. The beautiful new temple, built beside the old one in 1998, is now open daily. A service is held on the first Sunday of each month. Currently, there are over 100 Sikh families around the Murwillumbah area.

Knox Park - was named in honour of William Knox, Chairman of the Colonial Sugar Refinery and the Murwillumbah Commercial Bank in the late 1880's. Part of a large cane field which ran from Commercial Rd. to Nullum St. Mr Knox thought the park would benefit the growing population.

Murwillumbah Court House - In 1869, Joshua Bray held Courts of Request and Courts of Petty Sessions when required from his home. A slab hut situated at the old ferry crossing was the first Court House in town. Bray became the first Police Magistrate and over the next 20 years settled many disputes from here. In 1879 a new Court House was erected but later destroyed along with 65 other buildings in the great fire of 1907. A new Court House was opened in 1909 as part of the Police Station and Offices. Before the days of electricity, the Court House was lit by beautiful Juno lamps. These lamps are on display at the Tweed River Regional Museum in Queensland Road, Murwillumbah.

HISTORY

Coolamon Cultural Centre - a Federation building, with large wooden verandahs was originally the home of the Proudfoot family.

In 1986, the Doug Moran National Portrait prize was launched in the Tweed. As a result, donations were received to enable Council to begin work converting this building into the Tweed Regional Art Gallery. It was opened in 1988 (Bicentennial year), and for the occasion, special fire bricks were decorated by local people to form the walkway entrance to the former Art Gallery.

In 2006, the new Tweed River Art Gallery was built just south of the town on land donated by the Anthony family. The former Art Gallery was renamed the Coolamon Cultural Centre and now houses Community and Cultural Services for the Tweed Shire Council.

First Ferry Crossing - located beside the present Coolamon Cultural Centre. In the late 1870's the ferryman, Mr Doig worked a small ferry by hand, which connected both sides of the town. He lived for some time in a tent nearby. Shops soon sprang up near the crossing, including the Cosmopolitan Hotel, which eventually burned down and was replaced by the Proudfoot family home.

As the ferry could only carry two horses and carts at any one time, it eventually became too small for the increasing town's transport. In 1895, a public meeting was called to improve communications between south and north Murwillumbah. A punt was installed which stayed in operation until 1901. It operated from Budd Park to Ferry Rd. transporting passengers across the river and providing connection to the railway until the bridge was constructed.
