Tiny homes at huge home expo

There's a big appetite in the Tweed for money-saving food preparation tips, smaller dwellings and more sustainable home and lifestyle options in general, if attendances at the Living for the Future Home Expo on 3 September are any indication.

More than 1000 people headed to Seagulls Club in Tweed Heads West for this year's expo, with a Tiny Homes workshop and Love Food Hate Waste cooking demonstrations attracting some of the day's biggest crowds.

"A full house for the Tiny Homes – Big Impact workshop showed there's a lot of local interest for smaller dwellings, for more affordable housing, to reduce their environmental footprints or simply to suit people's lifestyles," the workshop facilitator and Council's Director of Planning, Vince Connell, said.

"Participants in the workshop were impressed by clever design and building approaches to make small homes increasingly comfortable and practical.

"There was also great interest in the display for the Northern Rivers Sustainable House Day Design Competition, which this year has a Tiny Homes theme and attracted more than 40 entries."

They will be showcased at a Sustainable House Day Expo at Mullumbimby Civic Hall this Saturday.

Expo organiser and Council's Program Leader – Sustainability, Deb Firestone, said: "Visitors told us they came away with really simple solutions to save costs, support local businesses, shape our community and make a positive contribution to the environment.

"Overall, we were spoilt by the quality and diversity of stallholders, workshop presenters and other activities, and support by Solo, BMW and Seagulls Club.

"If you want to revisit your favourite workshops, or you couldn't get to this year's event, podcasts are available to watch on Council's YouTube channel."

Information about stallholders and other activities is available at www.tweed.nsw.gov.au/HomeExpo

Drainage clean up begins

Council has begun work to combat noxious weeds in the western drainage system of Banora Point.

Currently Council is excavating weeds rooted in the floor of the drainage channel and moving around drainage bed soils to level the channel floor at the rear of Birkdale Court and Avondale Drive. This work will continue for two weeks.

In November, it will begin harvesting floating salvinia in Vintage Lakes to interrupt its spread at the start of the blooming season.

While the current incidence of red azolla in Vintage Lakes may seem unsightly, it is a native species and Council has no plans to intervene at this stage. Council will continue to monitor the situation during the summer growing season.

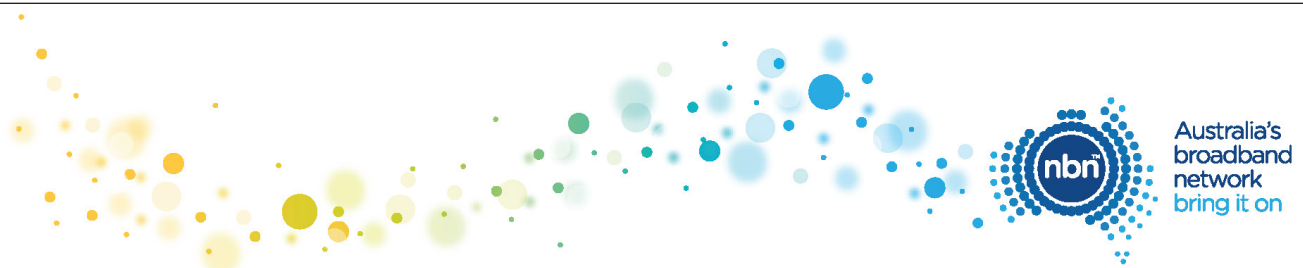

Not all the vegetation in the drainage system is weed. It also includes desirable species such as water lily and water fern, which provide habitat for the Comb-crested Jacana, which nests from November to August and is listed as Vulnerable under the NSW Threatened Species Conservation Act, 1995.

Clearing noxious weeds from drains is complex and accounts for most of Council's maintenance budget for this drain.

What are your estuary priorities?

Tweed residents will be asked how they use the Tweed River Estuary and their priorities for its management, to help produce a new plan to balance the waterway's use and preservation.

A random telephone survey will be conducted this month as a first step in community engagement for a Tweed River Estuary Coastal Management Program, which will follow NSW Government guidelines for coastal management.

While the phone survey will randomly contact Tweed residents to get a statistically representative snapshot of community attitudes and uses of the Tweed River Estuary, an online questionnaire mirroring the phone survey will be conducted in October for the wider community to complete.

The Tweed River Estuary is the tidal section of the river, a 35km stretch between the Bray Park Weir at Murwillumbah and the river mouth at Tweed Heads.

"The scenic waterway and its picturesque surrounds are extremely important to the local community and are many things to many people," Council's Waterways Management Leader, Tom Alletson, said.

"They are used extensively for recreational activities, are highly valued as a commercial waterway and are integral to tourism and agricultural practices on the floodplain, contributing to the local economy."

The Estuary has a diversity of habitats for a wide variety of plants and animals and is home to a number of protected flora and fauna species." He said maintaining the river's environmental health was essential to sustain all its beneficial uses by the community.

"It can be difficult to balance recreational, commercial and environmental priorities in a busy and popular waterway like the Tweed River, particularly in the face of population growth and rising sea levels," he said.

"The management plan will identify actions that can be implemented by Council, government agencies and the community to achieve the right balance between the many uses and to protect nature, scenic and recreational values, livelihoods and cultural practices."

Second Koala Zone complete

Council has completed work on its second Koala Zone in the shire. The distinctive green and yellow markings were applied to the new surface of a 300m stretch of Coronation Avenue, which passes through a low-lying area in Pottsville that separates two known koala habitats along a narrow vegetation corridor.

The decision to install the koala zone coincided with the scheduled upgrade of that section of road.

Council installed its first koala zone on Clothiers Creek Road, Clothiers Creek, in November 2014 and has since collected evidence that shows they do work. The effectiveness of that zone has been measured via traffic counters recording the speed of motorists.

Since installing the branded koala zone, there has been a positive trend of proportionally fewer motorists travelling at speeds above the posted limit - 60 per cent in January 2016 as opposed to 75 per cent before the zone was created.

The Koala Zone branding was paid for via a one-off offset contribution of $50,000 for the removal of some trees in Pottsville by a private developer some years ago. The road upgrade included construction of a slow point median to force traffic to reduce speed at that critical koala crossing point. The speed limit on the section currently is set at 50km/h.

Two solar street lights are yet to be installed to assist motorists to see any koalas that may be on or approaching the road.
